Students occasionally find that their professional direction changes so significantly during their training that they consider applying for admission to another program within the Department of Counseling, Therapy, and School Psychology. The following steps must be followed in order to ensure that decisions about program changes are made as carefully as possible. Allow at least two months prior to the next semester for this process. Note: Program changes are typically not allowed once practicum has begun.

1. Submit a letter, along with this form, to the CTSP office explaining why you want to pursue a different degree (e.g., philosophy of practice, future clients, etc.). This will be given to the director of the program you hope to enter.

2. Meet with the program director of the program you want to enter. Submit any additional letters of reference or information requested by the program director to the Counseling, Therapy, and School Psychology office. Listed below is the additional information you need to provide:
